שבועות תשפ"ו

דבר תורה

By R' Shmuel Adler

כנגד ארבעה בנים דברה תורה ... Whoops! Is it Pesach? What holiday are we up to!? Succos? Is Adler drunk! (:), maybe Purim?! ... Oh!, Shavuot! Kabolas HaTorah! The holiday which is only for the elite, the best learners. Is that right? NOPE! There are so many people out there, young and old, who struggle to learn gemara. So, so many people who feel inadequate, perhaps thinking this is simply not their Yom Tov, after all, they are not good at learning. I recently spoke in a Yeshiva for boys who have been through numerous struggles and I asked a pointed question, "Is there anyone in this room who feels it is easy to learn?" My question was met with a deafening silence, thick enough to be cut with a knife. This is exactly what the aforementioned loving words of the hagada declare to us; indeed, it is these words which every single one of us read even before we start counting towards Matan Torah ... invitingly making all of us, even those who struggle with learning, feel like we have our very own special personal connection to the Torah. It wasn't a mistake starting earlier with this quote from the hagada: כנגד ארבעה בנים דברה תורה: ... אחד חכם, ואחד רשע, ואחד תם, ואחד שאינו יודע לשאול ... This is the perfect introduction to celebrating Am Yisroel receiving the Torah, because it was every single member of Am Yisroel who stood at Har Sinai, regardless of who had more or less trouble learning Torah - everyone without exception was there, with their own personal chelek in Torah.

I read in Reb Dovid Hoffman's Torah Tavlin, a meshal from the Chofetz Chaim in his sefer "Toras Habayis" quoting a medrash. There was a king who instructed all of his servants to go fill barrels up with water, offering payment of one gold coin per barrel. The servants began their work diligently, while shortly thereafter one servant went off to the side doing nothing. When asked why he stopped, his response was that he noticed that all the barrels had holes in them - it was very discouraging to work so hard when all the water was draining out of the barrels anyways. Looking at him compassionately the foreman explained, we were told explicitly that if we fill the barrel, we will get paid a gold coin. Very simple. Never did the king say anything about what happens to the water afterwards! Says the Chofetz Chaim - what Hashem commanded us all is to do our very best to learn Torah. Every second we try, we are fulfilling His will. God measures our worth based on our devotion and sincerity, not on the amount that we learn or how much we manage to remember. "Echad hamarbeh v'echad hamam'it uvilvad sheyechaven libo lashamayim!" It can be so disheartening to study Torah when one feels they are not cut out for it. Yet, in truth it is that person who gets the most schar for their learning. May Hashem give us the strength to pick ourselves up and start filling those barrels as best as we can.

P.S. Be sure on Shavuot to wear a shirt with a pocket in it, the gold coins will certainly be overflowing onto everyone, the more pockets you have the more gold you'll get! And just ask our local jeweler, gold is at an all time high!!
